Session Notes

02/04/2025 14:24 Based on these two Java classes and based on the game Bulldog. Write me a class called HumanPlayer. This class will print the cumulative score earned so far in this turn and ask the user to choose whether or not to end the turn. It must use system.in to read the user's response from the keyboard

Included source code from Player.java and Wimp.java

02/04/2025 14:18 Write a class called Prog6 with a main() method. That starts with asking the user for the number of player who will play the game. It will create a game storing them in an arraylist<Player>. The players in that arraylist will be chosen by the user for each player. Multiple instances of a given class can be used. Then the program will play the game Bulldog with the players created. It will iterate through the list of players objects calling a method called play() each time and calling setScore() to update the players score appropriately. When ANY player's score reaches 104, the program will end the game for all players.

Included source code from Player.java and Wimp.java

02/04/2025 14:34 Based on these other classes. Write a class called RandomPlayer that will choose to continue or end the current turn randomly with a 50% chance for either choice.

Included source code from Player.java and Wimp.java

02/04/2025 14:36 Based on these other classes write a class called FifteenPlayer that will always choose to continue the turn until a score of at least 15 is reached, at which point the object will choose to end the turn.

Included source code from Player.java and Wimp.java

02/04/2025 14:40 Based on these other classes write a class called UniquePlayer that its strategy for the game is different from any other strategy of the other classes

Included source code from Player.java, Wimp.java, FifteenPlayer.java, HumanPlayer.java and RandomPlayer.java

02/04/2025 14:42 Update Prog6 to have the user have the ability to choose any type of player class that has been created

Included source code from Player.java, Wimp.java, FifteenPlayer.java, HumanPlayer.java, RandomPlayer.java, and UniquePlayer.java

02/04/2025 14:53 Change the value of the score to test if code written is correct.

It chose the value of 20

Included source code from Prog6.java

02/04/2025 15:20 Add another UniquePlayer Class and have its code be the following: I pasted my code from my previous assignment here

Included source code from Prog6.java

I would like to note that it failed to use my code property here. It ended up modifying it more than just changing necessary changes. I tried asking it to use my code a few times and failed to do so. Resulting in me having to manually copy and paste the code.

02/04/2025 15:42 Update Prog6 to now allow the player to choose UniquePlayerV1 as an option.

Included source code from Prog6.java and UniquePlayerV1.java

Step 4

Enter the number of players: 2

Enter the type of player (Human/Wimp/Random/Fifteen/Unique) for player 1: Fifteen

Enter the name for player 1: Fifteen

Enter the type of player (Human/Wimp/Random/Fifteen/Unique) for player 2: Wimp

Enter the name for player 2: Wimp

Player Fifteen rolled 6 and scored 0 for the turn.

Fifteen's total score: 0

Player Wimp rolled 2 and chose not to continue, scoring 2 for the turn.

Wimp's total score: 2

Player Fifteen rolled 6 and scored 0 for the turn.

My Steps for Getting to Step 5

This was the prompt I gave the AI: Add another UniquePlayer Class and have its code be the following: I pasted my code from my previous assignment here

It was able to create the class but failed to actually use my code. It ended up just trying to use the code it wrote for the UniquePlayer it wrote. I did give it direct access to that file. I wonder if that is why it kept using that.

I ended up having to copy my play method I wrote into the file.
